

Journal News – 2016

---

This year started with a very meaty 17 articles in the 2015 AALL Conference special issue. Many thanks to Alisa Percy and Joanne Dearlove who took on the large task of editing this special issue.

The current general issue is also going well, with currently five papers and a comment and reply published so far. A further 12 articles are at various stages of the reviewing and editing process, and one or two more of these articles might make this issue before it is closed.

As always, a big thank you to all the reviewers and the regular editorial team, Kate Chanock, Claire Aitchison, Cally Guerin, Rosemary Clerehan, Tim Moore and Andrew Johnson, who have all volunteered considerable amounts of their time and expertise to ensure JALL continues to publish high quality work of value to the academic language and learning community.

David Rowland

22/11/16

<http://journal.aall.org.au/index.php/jall/index>